

Direct Detection of WIMP Dark Matter: Concepts and Status

More than 95% of the matter and energy content of the Universe is dark [1], ie, it does not (or only very weakly) interact with photons and ordinary baryonic matter. A total of 25.9% is made of dark matter, a not-yet-identified form of matter which builds large scale structures in the Universe (The remaining 69.1% are due to dark energy,

Searching for Dark Matter with a Superconducting Qubit

The gravitational evidence for the existence of dark matter is extensive¹, yet thus far, dark matter has evaded direct detection in terrestrial experiments. Detection mechanisms for low mass dark matter candidates such as the axion^{2,5} or hidden photon^{6,7} leverage potential interactions with electromagnetic fields, whereby the dark matter
